

Abstract

An enhanced method and system for viewing any search result without returning to the result list, whereby users can review more data in less time and with less wasted effort. A computer with appropriate software adds a navigation control that provides a distinct navigation element linked to each data object that met the search criteria, while using less display area than the result list.